Throughout the month, kids will have time to play and just do what they like.

Mornings include a small welcome routine while the afternoons end with a short wrap-up routine.

Once every week, our cook will take a small group of 4-5 kids for menu-planning and budgeting, shopping at the local market and cooking the days meal.

We will have arabic language sessions 2-3 times a week at the hub.

The kids will also be involved in feeding the horse and tending the garden which will both be located just behind the hub.

Adjustments may be made based on the group's dynamics and unforeseen circumstances.

This schedule aims to provide a balanced mix of outdoor exploration, creative expression, and group reflection for a fulfilling experience.

Every Thursday parents are invited to participate at the closing circle where we collect feedback from kids and parents.

		4.3.		Tu	During the month of Ramadan, Muslims around the world observe various festivities, traditions, and specific food-related practices. Ramadan is a time of deep spirituality, reflection, and community. The various traditions and practices, especially around food, help to make this month unique and special. We want to give teenagers the opportunity to come to our hub, live together for a month and learn all about Ramadan. We will try to follow the rules, but its not a must. We will participate with local families in each of the traditional festivities. We will visit the mosque, learn about the prayers, read and discuss parts of the koran and will eventually understand what Ramadan is all about. The teens will runder their own Ramadan-Project aside from participating in the festivities. It will be based on the PBL-Method and I will support and coach the teens myself. The Hub will run on normal dates and times for the younger kids. There will be some interaction with the teen group but they run on their own schedule.
